Where do they go, ing flakes of the bright, white mow? They go to nourish the April showers; They go to foster the Maytime flowers; Where the roots of the indden grasses grow, There do they go.

How do they go! Drop after drop, in a silent flow, When the warm rain falls, and the winds are And the swallow sings in the rift of the cloud, ugh the frozen veins of the earth below They softly go.

Why do they got Because Dame Nature will have it so! More than this, truly, I cannot tell: I am neither a seer nor an oracle! When all is answered, I only know, That they come and go.

THE SEWERS OF PARIS.

A Pleasure Trip Under the Streets of the Gay Metropelis. Excursions under Paris form one of the features in the movement for the benefit of the sufferers from the recent floods in France, and the gorgeous sewers are liberally patron-ized by the fashionable world. A reporter of The Gil Bias gives this description:

"We started from the Place Chatelet at 3 o'clock and descended a little winding stair case, the steps and walls of which were covered with a green cloth fringed by a red bor-der. There is not the slightest danger of soiling your clothes or of encountering the slightest disagreeable odor. On arriving at the foot of the stairs a fine display of fruits and vegetables was the first thing to greet our eyes. These products were from Gennevilliers, and were grown in gardens that are watered by the sewers. We got into a wagen, in which were seats for twenty per-Off we went, shoved along by solid looking fellows, all neatly dressed. Above us was a mass of tubes and pipes. They are the water pipes, the two largest containing our drinking water from the Vaune and the water of the Ourcq, which is used for washing the streets and sidewalks. Then there are the pneumatic tubes, in which we can hear the rattle of the dispatch boxes as they shoot along.

"Suddenly we heard the passengers in the wagon ahead of us uttering cries of admiration. We were under the Rue de Rivoti, but soon we reached the crossing of the Rue du Pont Neuf. This trunel is lighted from end to end with garlands of colored lamps. The effect is fairylike. The same effect is reproduced under the Rue du Louvre, the Rue de Richelieu and the Place des Pyramides, where precisely under the statue of Joan of Arc appear in luminous glass the arms of the city of Paris. We passed along, still following the Rue de Rivoli, where each house has its num-ber in the sewer, just as in the street, until we reached the Piace de la Concorde. There the electric lights, crossing their fires with the reflections of the Venetian lamps, turn the square into a sort of ball room. Nothing is anting, not even the music. We all got out of the wagons to embark in large boats furnished with cushioned seats. The music was in the first boat, which was decorated with dags and lamps. The boats were started. We followed the entire route of the Rue Royale by the light of tifty dazzling electric

After a quarter of an hour in this boat we landed at the foot of a staircase, which we mounted, and in three minutes we were above ground at La Madeleine. It is much colder in the streets than it was in the sew winter, is always uniformly pleasant."—New

Organized Charity in Chicago.

The Provident wood yard is an institution for the confusion and discomfiture of tramps. It is in charge of a stony hearted young fel-low named McAuliff. It is under the direction of the Charity Organization society, and is self-supporting. When a tramp asks a charity organizer for help the charity or-ganizer refers him to the central office and the central office sends him to the Provident wood yard. When he gets there Mr. Mc-Auliff helps him to a bucksow and a few ing charity organizations and monopolies to general, and the man who invented a bucksaw in particular. But if he sticks to work for two hours or so, until he has one-sixth of a cord of wood sawed into kindling, be earns a ticket which is good for a 10 cent meal or a 10 cent lodging. Then, when he has walked two miles or so to the eating house and gorged himself on what his ticket calls for, he has received a good practical lesson in the virtue and reward of honest toil.—Chicago Tribune.

Queer Funeral of an Epicurean. A funeral of an extraordinary character took place in Yorkshire, when Mr. J. S. Broderick, a well known follower of Epicurus, of Hawes, in North Yorkshire, was buried. The interment took place in the deceased gentleman's own land at Spring End, on the top of a hill. Mr. Broderick, who believed in the transmigration of souls, had directed that no minister of religion should attend his burial, should be performed over his remains. The funeral, therefore, was almost of a unique description. The procession had to pass over Stagefell, one of the spurs of the Pennine range, and as the road was blocked in places over twelve feet deep with snow drifts the mourners had a most difficult task. The immediate place of sepulchrs was very rocky. It had been chosen by the deceased gentle man, and blasting operations had to be car-ried on during the whole of two days to com-plete the grave, which is nearly twenty feet below the surface. -Pall Mall Gazette.

ington, in Philadelphia, in perhaps all large cities, are conducted on debt paying principles, and therefore they grow very dull. Not that people desire indecorous pleasure, but they get bored to death by gilded and overburdened splender. Almost all hard working men in America are dyspeptic and only look at their hands during the three or four last courses. Two people are brought together, perhaps, who have never met be-fore. They have positively no subject in common. To relieve this awkward moment, to raise the dull, depressing cloud which settles over the jaded senses, what better that an

The Ears of Criminals.

The president of the Berlin police calls attention to the advantages accruing to police authorities everywhere by taking profile photographs of criminals which will distinctly show the left ear. He says that while the features of the face change in the course of time, the car retains its shape forever, and furthermore, there are no two persons whose ears are identically formed. Boston Tran-
